Key Takeaways

Phonetic or standardized cable tray symbols are generally available for free or as part of paid CAD/electrical design software, with prices varying by platform and licensing.Free Symbol Libraries

Several online resources provide free cable tray symbols in vector formats (SVG, PNG, AI) that can be used in electrical drawings:

- Elec-Mate Symbol Library offers cable tray symbols drawn to BS EN 60617 standards, including perforated trays, vertical drops, and busbar systems. Symbols can be downloaded individually or used in their AI Diagram Builder for circuit diagrams .
 - Icons8 and Vecteezy provide free cable tray icons and vector graphics suitable for design purposes, which can be edited and incorporated into CAD or documentation .
- Paid Options

For professional use, CAD software or electrical design platforms often include comprehensive symbol libraries:

- Elec-Mate offers a subscription-based service where users can access all cable containment symbols, drag them into diagrams, and use advanced features like containment fill calculations. Pricing is typically subscription-based, ranging from $10-$50 per month depending on features and region .
- Some CAD software packages (e.g., AutoCAD Electrical, Revit MEP) include cable tray symbols as part of their standard libraries, with the software cost ranging from $1,500-$4,500 per license, which covers all symbols and tools.

Considerations

- Format: Ensure symbols are compatible with your CAD or diagramming software (SVG, DWG, DXF, AI).
- Standards Compliance: For professional electrical drawings, symbols should comply with BS EN 60617 or local electrical standards.
- Updates and Support: Paid libraries often include updates, technical support, and additional features like automated calculations, which free downloads may not provide. In summary, free cable tray symbols are widely available online, while professional, fully-featured symbol libraries are typically part of paid CAD or electrical design software, with costs ranging from a few dollars per month to several thousand dollars for full software licenses .
